RainbowVisions Launches Online Multimedia Edition

YPSILANTI, Mich. Sept. 29, 2008 — The latest edition of RainbowVisions magazine, a publication of southeast Michigan-based Rainbow Rehabilitation Centers Inc., is now available online in a new, interactive Flash format.

Readers can see video clips of Vietnam veteran Charlie Morris, a traumatic brain injury and post-traumatic stress disorder survivor, in action as he golfs, plays tennis and rides his bicycle.

“Many individuals with brain injuries find themselves with deficits they had not encountered in the past. It creates self-esteem problems and cause feelings of inadequacy,” said Morris, “To overcome this, you have to change your self-perception and give yourself credit for small accomplishments. Positive things do happen.”

Charlie reveals his success strategies for overcoming his physical deficits in the fall issue of RainbowVisions. To read more about Charlie Morris’s story and to follow his recent advocacy efforts, log on to www.rainbowvisionsmagazine.com. Adobe Flash Player is required to view the magazine. For best results, the most current version of your web browser is recommended. Free e-subscriptions to RainbowVisions magazine are also available; to sign up, select Subscriptions from the top menu at the Web site.

About Rainbow Rehabilitation Centers Inc.
